The First Time Miss Maud Daughtery is Led to the Altar by a Man She Did Not Love.

Portsmouth, Va., Oct. 15. Saturday, Sept. 26 - Forced into marriage with other than whom she loved.

Saturday, Oct. 3-Returns to her mother's home.

Monday, Oct. 5-Her husband entreats her to return. She refuses, and he ends his life.

Priday, Oct. 9-She again marries. This time to the man whom she really loved.

Wednesday, Oct. 14-She, with her husband, sails for New York with the avowed intention of spending their honeymoon in writing and dramatizing the story of their remarkable courtship.

Buch is the startling though true ac-count of the past three weeks of the life of pretty nineteen-year-old Maude Gertrude, daughter of Mrs. J. C. Daughtery, of this city, who is now in New

As Miss Daughtery she had two suitors. One was Jefferson Pope, a sergeant of marines in the Norfolk Navy-Yard barracks. The other was William Mallory King, of Norfolk, Va. For the former she did not care. To the latter she was engaged. The marriage was to sergt. Pope was none the less per sistent and continued his attentions. Beat last excluded from the Daughtery home. But, undaunted, he would mee the girl on the streets and press his suit.

Moved to desperation, he met her on
